

Abstract of the Disclosure

An apparatus and method for creating an info segment which specifies interruption points at which a first content item should be interrupted in favor of a second content item. The info segment may prevent certain types of second content items from being utilized, may permit them to be avoided, may control their duration, and other aspects of their utilization. The info segment may specify with which first content item it is associated.